2015 JUDICIAL CONFERENCE

The United States Tax Court will hold a judicial conference beginning on the afternoon of Wednesday May 20, 2015, and concluding midday on Friday, May 22, 2015, on the campus of Duke University in conjunction with the Duke Law Center on Judicial Studies. The Court's judicial conference will provide an opportunity for taxpayer representatives, government representatives, and members of the Court to discuss current topics relevant to Tax Court litigation.

In the interest of expanding the discussion and providing as diverse a conference community as possible, the Court encourages academics, clinicians, practitioners, and others who have a professional interest in Tax Court practice and procedure to apply to attend and participate in the 2015 Tax Court Judicial Conference.

Applications to attend the 2015 Judicial Conference will be accepted through December 1, 2014. The Court will extend invitations in early 2015, and information concerning the cost of the conference will be included with the invitation. Please note that space is limited, and the Court may not be able to extend an invitation to all those who apply.

Applications may be found on the Tax Court website at http://www.ustaxcourt.gov/2015_JudicialConference/Application.pdf and should be returned to
